

Accidents happen, damage is optional.

We know what it's like. You're on a deadline. You're on a budget. The weather isn't helping. Your team is under pressure to deliver. That's when it happens. A small mistake. Someone not looking, something in the wrong place at the wrong time. A little accident.

Now it's a big problem.

It's a simple fact that completing your project without protection is a gamble. We know, we've seen what happens when it goes wrong.

It's a risk.

That's why we have a range of Temporary Protection Solutions which will protect surfaces completely, even from aggressive contamination. So, whilst the accident still happens, the big problem it would have caused doesn't.

Of course, sometimes it's not an accident, it's just the reality of the ongoing process of construction and refit. Some sections are complete whilst others are just being started. In those cases, you can get run-off or contamination but, again, damage isn't inevitable.

Do you want peace of mind?

On any site, whether construction or refit, there's a lot of intensive work being done. Our temporary protection disciplines will protect any surface, no matter how fragile, from damage or contamination and can be removed without a trace.

The NeroQom Squad can protect your project whilst your team works on it.

We will defend your surfaces from a range of damage and contamination caused by many types of construction methods or human-error including:

Our Disciplines are designed to look after a huge range of materials including glass, stone, stainless steel, anodised aluminium and much more besides. Adding in temporary protection can be the difference between a smile and a growing snag list.

That's a load off, isn't it?

Your project through our eyes.

Some surfaces are so incredibly fragile that even the most delicate adhesive can damage or destroy them.

If you have particularly delicate materials, then we're here to advise the best temporary solution for you. We'll ensure that it does the job you need and then, when removed, you'll never even know it was there.

NeroQom delivers professional solutions developed with the benefit of real experience. We know where the risks are and how to remove them because we've been doing this a long time.

Protect your surfaces... and your budget.

By bringing in NeroQom when you start your project, we can help you plan when and where you need temporary protection. Building this into your work-flow and budget from the very start.

This will also help you meet your obligations to your Operating Manual to keep any material warranty in place. Especially if you combine it with regular, in-construction cleaning services which is a service that NeroQom uniquely provides.

It will also ensure that handover is much smoother and your snag list much shorter. This not only saves time and money, but it also makes for a much happier client.

But we're not just here for temporary protection; NeroQom is your partner at every stage, from design to construction, exploitation to restoration, we're here to help.

That way we ensure results,
not more problems.

Handover is not the time to find out about a problem, but all too often that's when you get to hear about it.

Being proactive in the care of your project, setting the right example from the very beginning, will ensure that NeroQom doesn't need to repair or replace surfaces as you progress.

Sounds good,
right?
